The Tudor Rose

In Tudor times important families had their own symbol. These symbols often had special meanings that told you something about the family.

After Henry VII became king he married Elizabeth of York. Both Henry and Elizabeth had roses as their family symbol. Henry showed the joining of their families by joining both roses together to make the Tudor Rose.

The Tudor Rose is still used as a symbol for England today. You can see it on the uniforms of the guards at the Tower of London, on some 20p coins and in the UK coat of arms.

Jumble Biscuits

Jumbles were a popular biscuit during the Tudor period. They made use of new-found spices to add an exotic taste! Have a go at making some using the recipe below!

Ingredients

For the dough

1 tsp caraway seeds
375g plain flour, plus extra for dusting
½ tsp ground aniseed
½ tsp ground mace
60g unsalted butter, cubed
150g caster sugar
1 large or 2 small unwaxed lemons, finely grated zest only
3 free-range eggs, lightly beaten

To finish

1 free-range egg, lightly beaten
caster sugar, for sprinkling

Method

1. Line two large baking tray with baking parchment.
2. Place the caraway seeds in a spice grinder or pestle and mortar and grind to a powder. Sieve the caraway, flour, aniseed, and mace together into a bowl.
3. Rub the butter into the flour until it resembles fine breadcrumbs, then stir in the sugar and lemon zest. Add eggs and bring the mixture together to form a soft dough.
4. Divide the dough into four balls weighing 65g and four balls weighing 85g (you might have a little leftover). Place the dough balls on one of the prepared trays, cover with cling film and chill in the fridge for 30 minutes.
5. Preheat the oven to 180C.
6. Knead the four smaller pieces of dough on a lightly floured surface and roll using your fingertips into a 30cm rope. Knot into double knots and place on one of the lined trays.
7. Shape the remaining four larger pieces of dough into long ropes and cut away a quarter of each rope. Lay out (as pictured) into Celtic knots, using the reserved dough to make the rings that sit on top. Place them directly onto the other lined tray. (The double knots will take an extra 5–10 minutes longer to bake, so don't mix shapes on the baking trays.)
8. Brush with beaten egg and sprinkle with caster sugar. Bake the Celtic knots for 15–20 minutes, until golden-brown and the double knots for 20–25 minutes. Remove from the oven and leave to cool on a wire rack.

Tudor Spies

Elizabeth I wasn't popular with everyone. During her reign, there were lots of plans to replace her with a different king or queen.

To stop these plans Elizabeth used spies like Sir Francis Walsingham to keep an eye on what her enemies and even some of her friends were up to.

Tudor spies often used codes to send secret letters.

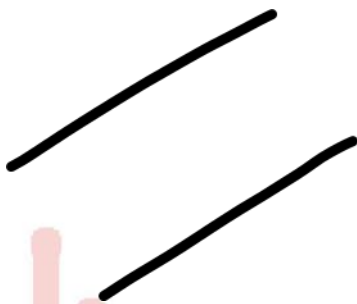

Try creating your own secret code.

Use the table on the next page to help you make your code. Try using different shapes or symbols for each letter of the alphabet.

Here are some examples to help you get started.

For some spies, having a secret code wasn't enough. They also used invisible ink to disguise their messages.

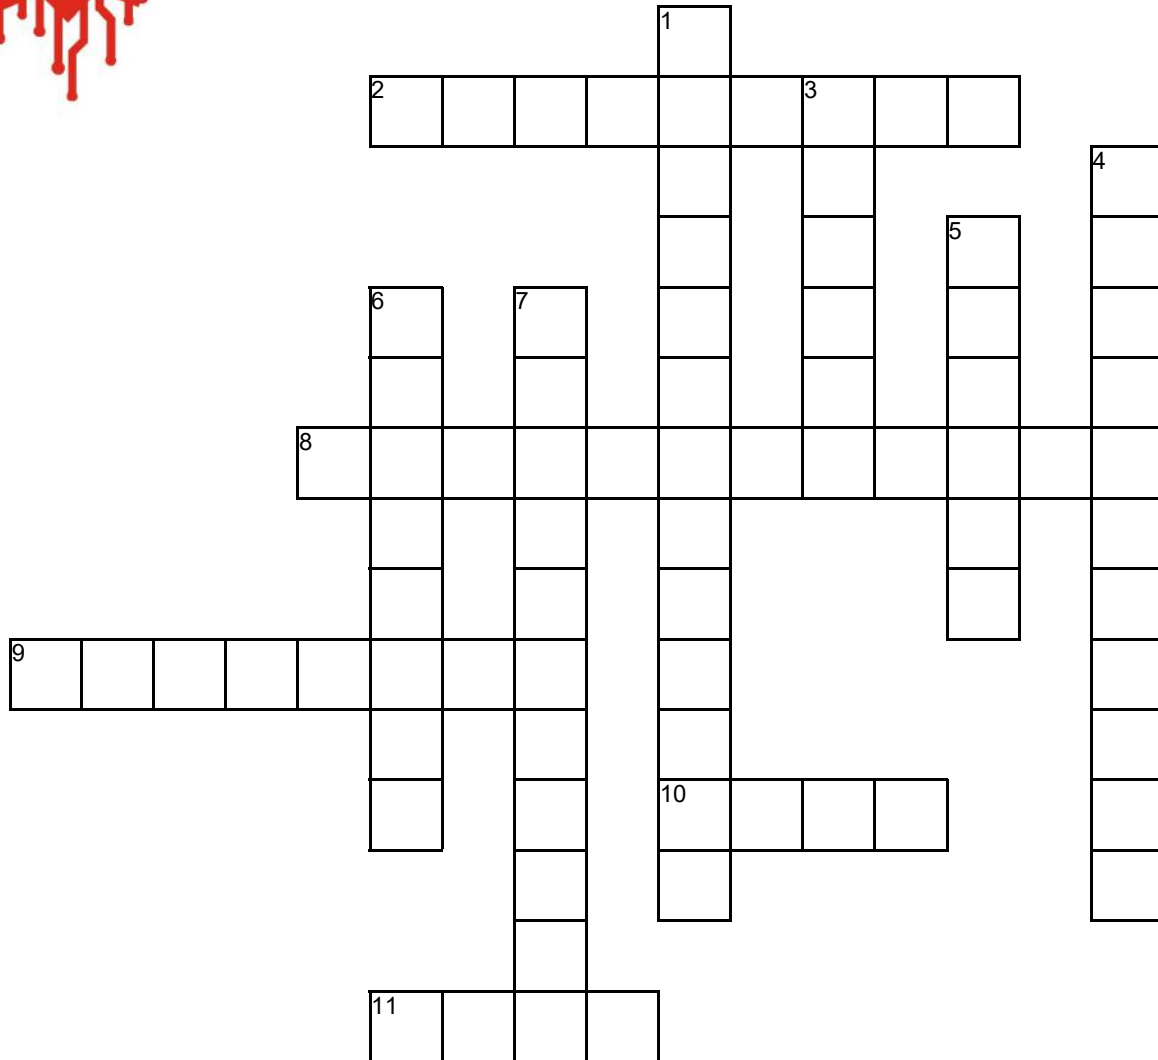

Why not have a go at creating your own invisible ink and using it to send a secret message to your friends or family?

Watch the video below to see how it's done.
